Indy lays a brick

Associated Press sportswriter John Nelson had this to say about the watching the Indianapolis 500 on TV:

Three hours of smoking tires, screaming engines and spectacular camera work by ABC, and what happens? We get to watch Al Unser Jr. win the Indy 500 under a yellow caution flag at 80 mph.

If my mother had a Mercedes, she could drive it that fast. Three hours wasted.

Then, in the first minute of his TV interview, Unser plugs Mercedes, Goodyear and Mobil Oil, hugs his father, and throws in a word about Marlboro for good measure. At least he didn't light up.

It's time for a few changes at the old brickyard.
